LIGHT FRANCHISE

Will Be Granted to C. E. Layton and Associates of Kokomo.

The electric light question is settled. At the special meeting of the city council Friday evening, the councilmen voted unanimously to accept the bid offered by C. E. Layton and associates, from Kokomo. The bid will be put in the form of a contract before next Thursday evening, and will be placed on the first reading at the regular meeting of the council at that time. Before it can be adopted, it must be read at three regular council meetings.

The bid was accepted after C. A. Tripp, the consulting engineer, who had spent the entire day Friday comparing the bids, had made his report. The councilmen stated that they depended much upon the judgment of Mr. Tripp, who had come highly recommended as an expert electrician and an honest adviser.

New Company Highly Recommended.

The men who secured the contract are now successfully operating an electric plant at Kokomo, and are held in the highest regard by their friends. One man, who was in the city a short time today, said that he was personally acquainted with Mr. Layton and stated that he felt sure that the city had made no mistake in granting the franchise to these men, who are thoroughly reliable and responsible to carry out any agreement which they should make.

C. E. Layton, who will be the manager of the new company, was graduated from Purdue in 1904. For three years he was manager of the Heat, Light and Power Company, of Noblesville, and is now manager of the commercial department of the Kokomo, Marion and Western Traction Company. He has had much experience in the electrical field and is well qualified for his new position. As soon as the construction work on the new plant is begun Mr. and Mrs. Layton will move to this city.

Will Build New Plant.

Although the plans of the new company are somewhat indefinite, Mr. Layton stated that it was their intention to purchase a site near the Southern Indiana railroad and erect a new building. They desire to build the plant along this road so that they may have a direct line into the coal fields of southern Indiana. They expect to install the latest electrical equipment, so that the best possible service may be given.

Mr. Layton stated this morning that bids would be received at once for the new machinery and other necessary equipment, and that the plans and specifications for their new building would be completed as soon as possible so that the work of installing the system could begin as soon as the franchise was passed by the council.

As soon as the council voted on the bids and it became known that Mr. Layton and his associate had been successful, Frank R. Graner, chairman of bondholders' committee of the Seymour Gas and Electric Company, stated that the people he represented were desirous of remaining in business, were planning to install new machinery and believed they would have their plant completed within eight months. He said certain improvements were already in progress with reference to the gas system. In behalf of the bondholders, Mr. Graner asked the council to consider the granting of a new franchise to them. The franchise under which the old company operated expired last fall.

Councilman Davison stated that all bidders had been given an equal opportunity to bid upon the contract, and that as the council had accepted the bid of Mr. Layton, thought the matter should be closed so far as the council was concerned.

The certified check accompanying the bid of Messrs. Bevins, Grover and Condon, was ordered returned to the bidders.

According to the provisions of the specifications, prepared by the consulting engineer, the plant must be in operation within eight months after the franchise is passed. The new company will push the work as fast as possible, and believe that the system can be installed by that time.

The report of the consulting engineer, C. A. Tripp, which had much to do with the decision of the council, is as follows:

SEYMOUR, Ind., April 22, 1910.

To the Common Council of the City of Seymour, Indiana:

Gentlemen—We have made an examination of the proposals of Mr. C. E. Layton and associates and C. E. Layton and as-

FIRE INSURANCE

Rates In Seymour Investigated By Deputy Attorney General.

George F. Bingham, traveling deputy attorney-general, is in the city collecting data concerning the rates of fire insurance charged in Seymour. He was present at the special meeting of the council Friday evening, and briefly stated the nature of the statistics which he desired.

On May 9, 1909, the attorney-general filed an injunction to prevent insurance companies from cutting rates in order to destroy competition. It seems that certain fire insurance companies have an agreed rate for different cities in Indiana. It is further shown that when a company, which does not accept this specified rate, endeavors to write insurance in this State, those companies affected by the agreement put the rates so low that the outside companies can not exist. The decrease in rates, however, are only temporary, and as soon as the outside companies cease business the original rates are resumed. In this manner competition is practically destroyed.

Mr. Bingham is here to ascertain the condition of the rates charged in this city. He says that in many instances the rates were raised about the time the San Francisco earthquake occurred. This was done because of the heavy losses there, and the companies increased the general rates in order to get back the large amount of money paid in California. In some cases this increase amounted to almost twenty-five per cent. He stated that although some of the companies have reduced their rates since that time, the reduction in many instances did not equal the increase.

While in Seymour Mr. Bingham secured from a number of business men the rates paid ten years ago and the increase or decrease since that time. In the majority of cases he found that the rates had been raised several times during that period and while there had been several reductions in the same length of time, the rates were usually found to be considerably higher than ten years ago.

FORMAL OPENING

Of Country Club Will Be Held Monday Evening.

The April committee of the Country Club has announced that the formal opening of the club for the summer will be held Monday evening. This event was set for last Thursday but on account of the unfavorable weather it was deemed advisable to postpone it until the first of next week.

The new pavilion has been completed and the committee is making preparations for a most elaborate social event. As this is the first social function given by the club this year every member is requested to attend. The committee has not issued formal invitations. It is expected that several members from Columbus and their friends will be present, besides a number of visitors from other places.

Excellent music has been engaged for the evening. Bands will leave from the corner of Chestnut and Second streets promptly at 7:45 and members to go by that means may reserve places by leaving their names at Andrews-Schwenk drug store. The music will start at 8 o'clock.

DIED.

BEATTY—Alfred Beatty, Jr., who was injured in the Big Four railway yards at Indianapolis Thursday morning about ten o'clock, died at St. Vincent hospital Saturday morning about 3:30. As stated in the Republican Friday, he fell from the top of a boxcar and the indications are that he received his fatal injuries in the fall. A half-dozen cars passed over his body as he lay unconscious between the rails, but as he was lying in a low place, it is thought that the cars cleared his body. The skull was badly crushed. Everything possible was done for him, but he never regained consciousness.

He was about 34 years of age, and left Seymour when a young man, going to Michigan, where he railroaded for several years before locating in Indianapolis. He had been the night switch foreman for several years until recently, when he was put on day work. For the past seven years he has been making his home with his mother, Mrs. Anna Beatty, who resides at 1445 Fletcher avenue. Besides his mother, he leaves two sisters: Mrs. Ingram Partlow, of Carmangay, Alberta, Canada, and Mrs. John Eudaly, of this city. He also has a number of half brothers and other relatives who reside in this county. Funeral at Indianapolis Monday afternoon.

MEN'S MEETING.

Addressed By the Hon. Charles J. Orbison, of Indianapolis.

"The Spirit of Brotherhood" will be the subject of Mr. Orbison's address tomorrow afternoon at 3 p. m., at the Presbyterian church. The speaker is one of the most prominent lawyers in Indianapolis and is both entertaining and eloquent. Doubtless, if the afternoon is favorable, a large crowd will be in attendance.

These union meetings for men, which have been held in the various churches in the city, meet the approval of all classes of men. The laymen have a rare way of presenting important subjects which men enjoy, and so far we have been greatly favored with speakers of eminence and ability. Every man who is not otherwise engaged tomorrow afternoon should hear the Indianapolis lawyer on a subject which is now of national interest.

A large chorus choir of men has been preparing music for the occasion and are asked to meet at the church at 2:35 p. m., ready to begin the song service at 2:45.

IMPORTANT

That Census Enumerators in City Should do work Carefully.

The census enumerators were seen busy at their work about the city and most of the work will be completed here within the next week. These enumerators can not be too careful in making inquiries about roomers throughout the city. Scores of people who live here and call Seymour their home do not live in families but rather have rooms in rooming houses and take their meals in some restaurant or boarding house.

If the census enumerators neglect to make inquiry in these cases the persons keeping such roomers or boarders should call attention to the same. Again there are numerous flats about the business section of the city occupied by families where the average person not familiar with the circumstances would least expect it. The population of Seymour has increased considerably since the last city directory was gotten out two years ago and consequently there are many railway men, factory men and other laborers besides families and heads of families whose names do not appear in the directory. Conservative estimates make the population of the city at the present time about 7,700. Every one should take pride enough in their home city to assist in making the census as accurate as possible. If they see the people are all interested in this way the census enumerators will be encouraged to use greater diligence in seeing that all of our population is listed. Many of the traveling men who reside in Seymour will be omitted in the census report unless careful search and inquiry is made. At this season of the year there are always a great many families moving and in the course of the two weeks or more that the enumerators will be at work with only three families moving a day it might be possible for each enumerator to miss forty families, with a total of two hundred people, or more. With all these things it is evident how careful the enumerators must be if anything like our total population is recorded.

PROMOTIONS

F. M. Curry Now Trainmaster on This Division of B. & O. S-W.

Among the other recent changes and promotions on the B. & O. S-W. which are of interest here is the promotion of trainmaster Joseph Donahue, of this city, from trainmaster on the Indiana division to a similar position on the Illinois division with headquarters at Washington. What is known as the Illinois division includes the main line of the B. & O. S-W. from Washington to St. Louis and also the Springfield division from mFlora, Ill. to Springfield, and the line running to Shawneetown. Mr. Donahue went to Washington last week and is already in charge of his new position.

Before coming here on September 10, 1907, Mr. Donahue was trainmaster on the Springfield division and his change from here to the Illinois division dates from April 10. Mr. Donahue is very popular among the railway employes at this place and they are sorry to lose him from this division. He has been succeeded here by F. M. Curry, of Chillicothe, O., who has been filling the position of assistant trainmaster on the Ohio division for some time and who by his years of experience in railroading is well qualified for his new position. Mr. Curry took charge of the business here about ten days ago.

It is rumored that James Flennigan, who has been Mr. Donahue's secretary since the trainmaster's office was moved here two and one half years ago, will be transferred to some of the offices at Cincinnati.

ANXIETY RELIEVED.

Discovery of Noah's Grave Lifts World's Weight of Sorrow.

A tremendous weight of sorrow will be lifted from the hearts of a long-suffering world, we fancy, when it becomes generally known that the grave of Noah has been definitely located by a certain scientific gentleman given strenuously to knocking around and about the earth and sticking his nose into the haunts of the quaint and curious of the long ago, says a writer in the Washington Herald. Noah sleeps the last sleep, it seems, on the summit of Jebel Judi, near by, and overlooking the plains of Mesopotamia.

Noah was a most picturesque individual. He was an exceedingly wise man in his generation, for he had sense enough to get in out of the rain when, according to the record, getting in out of the rain was all but universally considered extremely foolish and ill-advised. Nevertheless, had he not shown his surpassing wisdom by acting faithfully upon it, he would not have come to be known subsequently as the real, genuinely authenticated world's champion oldest inhabitant and the final appeal in all matters of ancient history.

Noah—who surely must have been in the original edition the Hon. or Col. Noah—probably may safely be set down as Exhibit A among Prohibitionists. If Congress had been invented during or before Noah's day, doubtless he would have been a member, and a shrewd and result-getting member at that. He knew how to play both ends against the middle most successfully—a sure sign of the intuitive and practical politician. He built and personally conducted the greatest water wagon expedition of all time, and yet it was known to Noah's closer friends and associates that he did not hesitate to laugh it to scorn on occasion and refuse to ride upon it quite frequently. Astute old Noah! Amid a world of wetness he alone was able to find a place to get off!

Of course, some of the spicier tales told concerning Noah may have had no real foundation in fact. They may have been given currency by the opposition, afterward duly and truly swamped at the psychological moment, righteously enough, it is to be hoped. It must be remembered that Noah held an undisputed monopoly of the earth's transportation business for a time, and probably was, in consequence, a particularly engaging target for the muck-rakers and malcontents of the day.

Anyway, whatever may have been Noah's shortcomings or virtues, and waiving the possible preponderance either way for the moment, his was a compelling personality, and inspires solemn contemplation and speculation even at this late hour. Rest his bones over there on Jebel Judi! He played a stirring part in an exciting drama of considerably more than tank dimensions.

ILLUSTRATING A STORY.

Some of the Trademarks Indicating What to Read or Avoid.

When the editor of almost any magazine obtains possession of what he considers a good story he hands it to one of his artists and instructs him to make some striking pictures of the characters. The artist does not read the story. Being a popular artist, he has no time; he promises himself that he will do it later, when it appears in the magazine, and it is easier to read in type. He goes, naturally, on the principle that any mechanical device which will make the story easier to read is so much gained; he has learned this from experience.

He can usually tell by glancing at the title and all around the edges of the manuscript just what kind of a story it is.

If it is a domestic story he draws two people standing up, leaning against a mantel, selecting his design from "Country Homes in America."

If it is a sea story he pictures a mean-looking, piratical man, with long black whiskers, holding a limp-looking girl with her hair hanging down her back, over the side of a vessel in a seventy-mile-an-hour hurricane.

If it is a humorous story he makes a woman holding up her hands in the air, while some one else is telling her something. Why, in every humorous story, a woman should always hold her hands in the air we do not know. We are here to give facts, says the Boston Herald.

If it is a society story, two people are sitting in a fashionable restaurant, while other people are watching them as they devour their food.

If it is a rural story, a man and a woman are standing up in a garden, if there is any work to be done, the woman is usually doing it, while the man smokes a cigar.

If it is a child's story, two children fill the space; their various curves even lop over, like so many apples in a fruit dish.

Now, there are some fastidious people who murmur at this sort of thing. They declare that illustrations to a story are likely to make it worse, and whatever appeal there may be to the imagination is circumvented by these same pictures.

But they do not understand. They do not perceive that illustrations to our magazine stories serve a most useful purpose.

Even in our haste we might be tempted to read many of these stories if they had no pictures. But the pictures act as a sure guide. Merely by glancing at them we can tell the kind of a story it is, and the reason why we should avoid it.

CHAINED UP A RAILROAD.

Persistent Creditor Got His Money Before the Lone Engine Ran.

The recent failure of a little railroad up state brought out a story of the financial straits in which the road—the S. & C. It may be called for want of a better name—found itself somewhat more than two years ago. It seems that the little road had been leased for years to a newly organized company which planned extensions and issued bonds which were fairly well received on foreign exchanges, but which proved difficult of negotiation in New York. There was very little income from the few miles of road in operation, the New York Sun says, but considerable outgo for construction work. As a result the railway company found itself before long in serious financial straits. Just at the worst possible time along came a creditor with a bill, ninety days overdue, for $265. He got an attachment against the railroad and took the first train up state to serve it.

When he reached the terminus of the little road he found a tiny station no bigger than a New York elevated station and presided over by a 19-year-old ticket agent, a bunch of old time tables and a few rickety chairs. In the roundhouse was a rusty, old-style engine that had simply refused to take another trip and had lain down to rest its decrepit old bones. The other engine was making its daily run of the S. & C. system.

Apparently the only thing for the man with the $265 claim to do was to return to New York, but he showed himself to be a man of resources. He went to the town blacksmith and bought a heavy steel chain and ponderous padlock.

When the train pulled in that night the creditor attached the locomotive legally by means of his writ and physically by means of his chain and his padlock, which he slipped through the driving wheels and under the rails. It was a strategic move, for it completely tied up the railroad. In the end the train crew, the G. P. A. and what few officials the road could boast of clipped in and raised the $265. Then the creditor removed the chain and traffic on the S. & C. was resumed.

Song by an Old Bachelor.

O, tender lovely woman is,
A thing of down and satin;
Some spot of deathless roses she Should make her habit in.
How carefully she wraps her up
When winter swirls and rankles;
A seakins sack upon her back—
And gauze upon her ankles.

O, gracious lovely woman is;
In Gleed the balm, she;
The ministering angel here,
Man's stay in storm and calm, she,
She smooths our brow, she buoys us up

Through fate's outrageous twisters—
And with fair lips she soundly rips
Her luckless errant sisters!

O, fragile lovely woman is;
Behold the "weaker vessel,"
Unfitted by her feeble frame,
With stress and ruth to wrestle,
Not hers to walk, not hers to work,
With ease her path we hem, sir—
So that she may but shop all day
And "bridge" till 4 a. m., sir!

O, darling lovely woman is,
The vine about the oak, she;
Our ever-present joy and light;
Our ever-present joke, she,
Without her life would be but gay
And we but dull, sad foxes;
'Tis she supplies us paradise—
And sundry paradoxes!
—Baltimore American.

Not in Stock.

A Boston sportsman who has just returned from the Maine woods tells of an incident which happened in one of the small country stores in the Pine Tree state. Laid up with a cold one day, and consequently forced to remain indoors, the hunter went to the village store in search of something to read. Robert Browning he held as his favorite author, so he promptly asked the rather elderly shopkeeper to look over his shelves and see if he had Browning's works among a small array of books tucked away in an obscure corner.

"Nope," replied the storeman, running over his shelves, "we got blueing, blacking, and whitening, but I don't see no browning anywheres."—Boston Herald.

Where They Went.

Is it any wonder that the members of the Metropolitan Temple congregation, New York, grinned broadly when, in the course of his sermon Sunday, Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill remarked, gravely: "Washington followed his God, Napoleon his star of destiny; Washington died respected and with honors and went to heaven, Napoleon to Hel-en"—with the accent on the first syllable.

Quite So, Reggie.

Concerning Dr. Wiley's statement that fresh eggs will sink in salt water, Reginald writes: "This explains a long unanswered problem, viz.: When a ship lays to, what becomes of the eggs? Of course, being fresh laid, they sink immediately."—Boston Transcript.

In the Dark.

"What made you ill?"
"Some dish with a French name."
"And what are you taking?"
"Some compound that the doctor ordered in Latin."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The details of the latest Kansas City "high society" scandal, "endurin'" and after the event, plainly show that, while money may still contrive to make the mare go, it has not yet removed the difficulty of making silk purses out of porcine materials.

The inducements to temperance are many. A small town recently voted to remain "dry" for fifty years in order to accept the conditional gift of a millionaire, who offered it an electric light plant, a sewerage system and, to cap the climax, a water works plant. Other improvements of less importance were included in the proviso. All in all, everybody, even the millionaire, is benefited.

Mrs. Martin W. Littleton's Bible study class has evoked many imitators in New York, and society women, we are told by veracious correspondents, are enthusiastic over the new departure. Quite apart from its religious significance, the Bible is a comprehensive compendium of literary excellence in which the most capricious mind can find satisfaction. Romance, war, government, intrigue, law and civilization are all written into its wonderful pages. And, to judge from the stories that fill the newspapers, society will be none the worse for a daily chapter from the Bible. The absence of moral training from the average American school is blamed by many students of history for the present unsettled condition of public and private conscience. It is, perhaps, too much to expect that Bible reading will notably improve the present adult generation, but, if it serves only to awaken the public mind to the necessity of teaching children at least the ordinary virtues of good citizenship, great good will result.

One Dr. Steiner, Professor of Applied Christianity at Iowa College, in a recent address to the Young Men's Christian Association at Columbia University, asserted that "the nine hundred thousand immigrants who came to our shores last year served a far better purpose than an equal number of university graduates unwilling to begin work at the bottom of the ladder." This is one of those broad, sweeping assertions that learned lecturers like to make, perhaps to arouse the flagging interest of their audience and the public. The immigration question can stand upon its own bottom. This country still welcomes aliens with few limitations, and a large percentage of the influx from foreign lands become valuable citizens.

But the national commissioner of immigration says that at least two hundred thousand, and probably more, of the aliens who came here last year are not wanted; that they will be of no benefit to the country, but on the contrary a detriment. In 1905 President Roosevelt, speaking of immigration, said: "Distribution of these aliens is of little value unless there is adequate restriction. These immigrants are wheedled and cajoled often against their best interests, to come here." So it seems that our immigration laws might still be beneficially amended with a view to securing a better class of incoming population and to protecting the immigrants themselves against cajolery and fraud. As for the university graduates and the immigrants, there is no just basis of comparison between them. If the demand is for the most unskilled class of manual labor, perhaps the humble immigrant is more valuable; but a young man, native to the soil, upon whom his family have expended loving pains, as well as money, to train in the right way, and who has had the advantage of one of our great institutions of learning, ought to be more valuable in an all-round way. The complaint that scholastic graduates are not willing to begin at the bottom of the ladder is hardly tenable as applied to the whole graduating body. Most of the educated young men nowadays seem to be willing to begin at the foot, in any line they may choose, and work up. This is one of the facts which affords the most hopeful indication of the future of the country.

There is one thing that has not advanced in price. Talk is as cheap as ever.

Four hundred and fifty-nine dollars is the amount which a young man working as a day laborer saved in two years. He had insisted in an argument that a laborer can save money, and to prove his point announced that he would save four hundred dollars in twenty-four months. He worked for eleven different men in that time, and the highest wage he received was forty dollars a month. But he demonstrated that a man can save money if he is willing to make an effort.

How the government encourages gambling in land homesteading is shown by the Belle Fourche irrigation project in South Dakota. Here are only 10,000 acres, rendered very valuable and immediately productive by irrigation, forty acres of which with water rights cost only $1,200, payable in ten yearly installments. Yet all claims have not been taken. Yet contra, when a like amount of an Indian reservation in Idaho was opened under the gambling plan last year in Idaho, there were ten claimants for every tract, and each claimant spent enough to pay two years' installments on a real irrigated farm, while only one in ten got anything at all, and what he got was not so valuable per acre. It is the gambling feature of the Indian reservation openings which attracts, and not a home-making opportunity on a sensible business basis.

While preparing recently for their examinations, the young men of a Western university voted not to shave until after the examinations, on the ground that growing beards would serve to remove temptation to neglect their work for social diversions. About the same time the newspapers told of the solemn decision of the young ladies in another institution to enforce a social boycott against the male students who were wearing, or "coaxing into existence, mustaches. The two incidents illustrate the present attitude of the social world toward shaven and unshaven men. Not that a bearded man is ostracized by the world at large, whatever may be the case in undergraduate circles, but that clean-shaven faces among men of all ages are now becoming the rule. It was not always thus. In ancient times the beard was the badge of manhood, the insignia of dignity and authority. This is still true in the Jewish race; and the strongest oath of the devout Mohammedan is "by the beard of the prophet." Note the long braided beards of the kings of Assyria and Babylon, as indicated by the sculptured images which have survived. In those days slaves were compelled to be smooth-shaven, and the beardless youth was an object of scorn. In Greece and Rome the custom varied with the periods. Most of the great Romans of later times were beardless. In the middle ages and in the Elizabethan era beards were generally worn, although occasionally a beardless monarch led a change in style which made the barbers happy. In Great Britain and this country the beard was almost unknown in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. In the nineteenth century it came into general favor. Most of the young men of a college graduating class of the fifties and sixties were all the beard they could raise. Then the young men took to the moustache, which is now far less common. When man accuses woman of being a creature of the arbitrary whims of fashion, she may well retort by pointing to his beard—or to the place where it might be.

Public charity is not always kind, but the order recently issued by the Boston police commissioner indicates that he understands human nature. Hereafter the names of families found in destitution are to be kept from the public and reported only to such authorities as have a right to know and a desire to give relief.

Persons at whose houses the mail is delivered once or more a day may answer the bell as quickly as they can; nevertheless, the aggregate time which the letter carrier loses by having to wait for the door to be opened is considerable. The Post Office Department figures it as averaging thirty seconds for each call, and as representing a loss to the government of four hundred thousand dollars a year. For this reason the post office appropriation bill provides that after June 30, 1911, carriers shall not deliver mail at any house not provided with a suitable mail box accessible from the outside.

Life holds many pleasant surprises for even those whose fate is not the most fortunate. That fact was discovered by a Michigan woman the other day, who began a search for her brother and sisters. They had all been put in an orphan asylum on the death of their parents, and had been adopted by families in different parts of the state. In the course of her search, the woman learned that a little girl with whom she used to play when she was small, and of whom she was very fond, was her own sister. Her foster-parents had moved to the town in which the family dwelt that had adopted the sister, and they lived side by side. Whether the families knew the girls were sisters does not appear, but the girls were unaware of the kinship. And now comes the delightful knowledge that these childhood friends were sisters, and had known each other for years—how delightful only those who have vainly longed for intimate association with their own kin can understand.

Accomplished cooks, men who know that they practice not the least of the arts, have long been accustomed to name their most savory inventions for eminent persons in other walks of life. They mean to pay a delicate compliment, to offer a generous tribute from genius to genius. But such compliments are not always welcome. A young opera singer, who is so much admired in Boston that the hotel chefs have begun to name their soups and souffles in her honor, thinks so. She has consulted lawyers, applied for an injunction, and had herself effaced from the bills of fare. The proceeding has enlivened the courts and animated the news columns of the daily papers because of its novelty. Famous persons, when they have not been flattered by such attentions, have usually suffered them stoically. In some cases, too, the cook has actually given the celebrity a wider immortality than he could have won by himself. Many a man has ordered a flet Chateaubriand who never heard of "Atala" or "The Genius of Christianity." Long and distinguished as was Count Nesselrode's career, his pudding is known where his diplomacy is forgotten. The Father of his Country himself has to stand sponsor for a pie by no means worthy of his solid and substantial virtues. And a prima donna more famous than the Boston singer lends the honey of her name to the delicious "peche Melba," and is not ashamed of it. Men have even permitted eulgs to be named for them without inquiring too closely into their quality. Mr. Blaine, although he never used tobacco, did not talk of injunctions when such an honor was thrust upon him, however little he may have liked it. The picture of the poet Bryant was long familiar on the lids of certain flat boxes of red cedar, but he was dead when the honor was thrust upon him, and could not protest. A public career has its penalties as well as its prizes.

Beautiful Wall Coatings for Homes.

In line with the progress of all other things in these modern days is the beautiful, perfect and sanitary wall coatings for our homes. Alabastine is the name of a rich, soft and velvety preparation for the decoration of walls and ceilings. It adheres to the walls of its own adhesive qualities. It is inexpensive, clean, artistic and so easily put on that any one can follow the printed directions on every package. Any shade or tint is easily produced. Alabastine is proof against insects or disease germs so prevalent in wall paper. It does not rub off and flake like kalsomine. A complete color plan for the walls of the home and stencils to help make the home beautiful, together with a book about home decorations and samples of color effects will all be sent free by the Alabastine Company, 482 Grandville avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich. This liberal offer to home decorators deserves careful perusal.

Erskine's Puns.

A great wit of the Scottish bar was the Hon. Harry Erskine, who was lord advocate. Though punning is not, as a rule, a high form of wit, with Erskine it became a fine art. On one occasion he undertook to pun on the subject of his friend's first sentence. His friend began, "The king!" Harry intervened. "The king," he said, "is no subject." Again, a Mr. Dunlop challenged him to pun on his name. "Nothing easier," said Erskine. "Lop off the last syllable and it is done."—London Standard.

A Scriptural Explanation.

When William Pengelly was a sailor boy, weather-bound on the coast of Devonshire, he had his earliest geological experience, and S. Baring-Gould, the author of "Cornish Characters and Strange Events," says he was wont to relate it as printed below.

I received my first lesson in geology at Lyme Regis very soon after I had entered my teens. A laborer, whom I was observing, accidentally broke a large stone of blue lias and thus disclosed a fine ammonite—the first fossil I had ever seen or heard of.

"What's that?" I exclaimed. "If you read your Bible you'd know what 'tis," said the workman, somewhat scornfully.

"I have read my Bible. But what has that to do with it?"

"In the Bible we're told there was once a flood that covered all the world. At that time all the rocks were mud, and the different things that were drowned were buried in it, and there's a snake that was buried that way. There are lots of 'em, and other things besides, in the rocks and stones hereabouts."

"A snake! But where's the head?" "You must read the Bible, I tell 'ee, and then you'll find out why 'tis some of the snakes ain't got no heads. We're told there that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head; that's how 'tis."

For the Old Fashioned Coffee Was Killing.

"I always drank coffee with the rest of the family, for it seemed as if there was nothing for breakfast if we did not have it on the table."

"I had been troubled some time with my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse steadily."

"Sometimes it would beat fast and at other times very slowly, so that I would hardly be able to do work for an hour or two after breakfast, and if I walked up a hill, it gave me a severe pain."

"I had no idea of what the trouble was until a friend suggested that perhaps it might be caused by coffee drinking. I tried leaving off the coffee and began drinking Postum. The change came quickly. I am now glad to say that I am entirely well of the heart trouble and attribute the relief to leaving off coffee and the use of Postum."

"A number of my friends have abandoned the old fashioned coffee and have taken up with Postum, which they are using steadily. There are some people that make Postum very weak and tasteless, but if it is boiled long enough, according to directions, it is a very delicious beverage. We have never used any of the old fashioned coffee since Postum was first started in our house."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

IN FINE HARMONY

Sixth District Republicans Give Indication of Feeling Over the State.

[Special Correspondence.]

Indianapolis, April 23.—Republicans who have been worrying over the Sixth congressional district and predicting chaos and upheaval in the nine counties of that district over the congressional matter, can now lean back and take ease again. Or if they must worry, they can turn their minds to other sections of the commonwealth, or to other states. Sixth district Republicans, in re-nominating Congressman Barnard, and in their stand on the protective principle without any arbitrary demand as to schedules, while at the same time strongly urging a non partisan tariff commission with proper powers, has achieved a harmony agreement which inspires confidence among all elements in the Republican organization. Republicans have lined up and are preparing to fight the proposition. In the convention at Connersville it was found that the disputes on the tariff and the difference of opinion as to the tariff law were not nearly so serious as had been supposed. The argument was not long, for the parties to the discussion found that they were not far apart, and found it easy to get together in peace and good will. No time was lost in getting together. The result is that the congressional ticket and the legislative ticket are helping each other. The friends of Congressman Barnard and the friends of Senator Beveridge have placed themselves on a basis of mutuality, and all will work together for the general good. It is realized fully that the congressmen and the candidates for the legislature must pull together to win. There are eight candidates for the legislature in the Sixth district. The Beveridge men feel that they need these eight votes in the 1911 caucus if the senior senator is to be returned. The Barnard men are in line for the legislative ticket, and by the same token the Beveridge men and the friends of the state ticket are hustling for Barnard's success. The forecast is victory all around.

It has been gratifying to all Indiana Republicans to see harmony take possession of the various district organizations. The Thirtieth left off with a whoop for John Moorman. The Tenth gave Congressman Crumpacker a fine send-off. The Seventh nominated a popular and strong man, L. A. Cox who will be elected sure. The Eleventh solved its problem by choosing John L. Thompson, admittedly the wisest and best choice under the conditions, who would be elected by 3,000 to 4,000 if the election were to be held tomorrow. Now the Sixth is in line with an acclamation nomination for Congressman Barnard, and a good working understanding among the workers of the district.

With Governor Marshall out of the Democratic race for the United States senatorship, by reason of the impossibility of turning the state over to the mercies of Frank Hall and Tom Taggart, Hall's boss, it becomes, pretty definitely settled that there is a strong movement to rally forces for John W. Kern for the senatorial place. More than that, it looks as if Mr. Kern is to be the senatorial nominee of the state convention in case the delegates vote to take a hand in the nomination of a United States senatorial candidate. In the first place, Mr. Kern will have the backing of a lot of Democrats who know that he was mistreated by the Shively-Taggart-Shea secret ballot caucus of 1909. Then, in the windup when the fight lies between Kern and John E. Lamb of Terre Haute, the Taggart forces will be for Kern to beat Lamb, and also incidentally to control Kern by the moral suasion of support and by the tardy but pleasing return of the marbles which were wrested from him in the last caucus. In effect, the Taggart men are likely to be called on to make a hurried jump for the end-game of the Kern bandwagon, as they did for the Marshall vehicle on an occasion that is historic. In this run and jump they may appease a lot of Kern men who have been very sore against Taggart for the year last past.

In no spirit of carping unfriendliness it is recorded here that John W. Kern has attained the eminence that goes with chronic candidacy. True, he says at this time that he is not after the senatorship. But his friends are drumming in a thousand camps, and his old guard is putting on marching accoutrements and falling in. The Marshall men are not unfriendly toward Mr. Kern, nor have they doused his toga dream. At the same time, it is intimated that the governor would like to see a new figure in the van of the senatorship column. For example, some positive fighting force like John A. M. Adair, twice Democratic congressman from the Eighth district, would give the Democratic battle line a better front than Kern can put up. Kern has been not only a perennial candidate for office, but he has lost just as perennially. He is the old-style campaigner, vitriolic and sarcastic, and in many campaigns he has helped the Republicans line up their forces by attacking the voters with too much vigor and vinegar. Abuse long ago ceased to avail in political campaigns, but Mr. Kern, unfortunately for himself, has not learned this fact. He keeps right on hurling hot shot when he should be cooling soft as any dove. He is entirely too valiant and lays about too shrewdly to get far in politics.

A LATER TRIP IS CONTEMPLATED

The President May Visit Indianapolis In June.

TO PLEASE THE OLD GUARD

The Elder Statesmen Who Insisted That Mr. Taft Made a Mistake in Cutting the Hoosier Capital Off His Visiting List Have Been Appeased by the President's Promise to Go to Indianapolis Real Soon.

Washington, April 23.—President Taft is going west April 29 and he is coming back to Washington May 6. On that day a garden party at the White House will require his attendance.

He is going to Indianapolis, but he is not going to speak. He will be whisked through there early on the morning of May 4, and he will be sleeping when it happens. Coming back he will not touch Indianapolis. There is some disappointment in this for the Old Guard, whose leaders told Mr. Taft on April 6 that he would have to go to Indianapolis and spank Senator Beveridge for turning down Mr. Taft and the tariff bill. On receipt of the news from the Indiana platform an engagement to speak in Indianapolis had been cancelled by President Taft. At the White House it was stated that a garden party was scheduled for May 6 and the president had forgotten it when he made the Indianapolis engagement. The president cut out Indianapolis and put in St. Louis. Now the Old Guard must be content with the president's promise to go to Indianapolis real soon. He goes west in June to speak in Ohio and Michigan. It is expected that the Indianapolis speech will be sandwiched in about that time.

ALBERT W. WOLTER

Convicted of Cruel Murder of Pretty Young Stenographer.

THE CHAIR OF DEATH FOR CRUEL MURDERER

Jury Finds Slayer of Ruth Wheeler Guilty.

New York, April 23.—Albert W. Wolter, who has been tried for the murder of Ruth Amos Wheeler, the girl who went to his rooms to get employment as a stenographer, was found guilty of murder in the first degree last night by a jury in Judge Foster's part of general sessions. From the time that the jury returned to its seats at 10:30, until Wolter was led out of the courtroom after the reception of the verdict, he gave no sign of the slightest emotion. The jury was sent out of court shortly after 7 o'clock.

"Gentlemen of the jury, how say you?" asked the clerk. "Do you find the defendant guilty or not guilty?" Wolter was standing at the bar outside the railing at which his lawyer was sitting. The foreman faced the German boy squarely and said:

"We find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree."

Not the slightest interest showed in Wolter's face. The two Wheeler girls sat with fingers to their lips. Judge Foster set next Wednesday for the day of the sentence.

Wolter walked along the benches where the spectators sat, with his eyes looking into the faces of the crowd. He turned into the hallway that leads to the Tombs without a trace of excitement.

Ready With an Answer.

"Queer habit Miss Passay has when you're talking to her." "Why? Doesn't she listen?" "Oh, yes, very attentively, but she keeps nodding her head and interjecting 'yes,' 'yes,' all the time." "I think she has fallen into that habit waiting for some man to propose."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Could Be Changed.

"Yes," she said, and her voice was firm, "my hair is naturally black and I'm not ashamed of it, and I don't care who knows it." The young man nodded. "It is best to be honest," he murmured. "Do you like black hair?" she asked him. "Pretty well," he answered. "There are other tints," she hastily said. "Some people like other tints. I've tried to give you my honest and unalterable views on the subject—but, of course, they can be changed."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Interruptions.

"What sort of a time did you have at the musical?" "It was rather disconnected," replied Miss Cayenne. "Whenever I got interested in the conversation the music would start, and whenever I got interested in the music somebody would begin to talk."—Washington Star.

An Embryo Emancipator.

A little miss riding on a Brooklyn trolley car the other day tendered the conductor half fare. "How old are you, little girl?" he queried, gingerly handling her fare. She pursed her lips for a moment, then calmly opened her purse, dropped two more pennies into the conductor's extended palm, snapped her purse and demurely said: "You have your fare, sir; my statistics are my own!"—Brooklyn Life.

The Polite Waiter.

"Waiter! I've wanted an hour for my order to be served!" "Thank you, sir. Allow me to compliment you on your rare patience."—Cleveland Leader.

Plain Prediction.

The Englishman's Pipe.

She—I think it's awfully nice of you to have erected a monument to your grandfather in the middle of your lake, Sir George. He—Yes, you see I had to have something to knock my pipe out on when skating.—Lustige Blatter.

An Embarrassing Moment.

Manager—The crowd in front is calling for the author. Star—That's nice. Manager—Don't think it. The house is packed with his creditors.

Efficacious.

Friend—What? You don't mean to say you saved the lives of those freezing men by mental treatment? Explorer—Yes, indeed. We persuaded them that they were watching one of the early season's ball games.

A Natural Question.

Almost.

Foreigner—But is the English language capable of expressing anything? Native—Certainly. Look at the names on our Pullman cars!

Subtraction.

"Now, in order to subtract," the teacher explained, "things have always to be of the same denomination. For instance, we couldn't take three apples from four pears, nor six horses from nine hogs."

"Teacher," shouted a small boy, "can't you take four quarters of milk from three cows?"—Jewish Ledger.

When the Good Man Died.

Murphy—Poor O'Reilly is dead. And a good old soul he was. Casey—Yis, and a thoughtful wan, too. Shure, before he died he called all his creditors to him and told them where they could borrow enough to cover what he owed them.—Brooklyn Life.

Self-Victimized.

"So you got that article you were bidding on at the auction?" "Yes," answered Mrs. Snapper. "Isn't it provoking? I was merely trying to run the price up on that other woman."—Washington Star.

Not Any Sometimes.

"You should not always be knocking people." "I'm not; I'm merely telling the truth about them." "Well, what's the difference?"—Houston Post.

A French scientist has figured that it would take a 350,000,000 candle power lamp to signal Mars, and even at that the Martians would have to use telescopes magnifying ten thousand times to see it.

The first carbon filaments made by Thomas Edison for his new incandescent lamp were made from thread dipped in lampblack and tar and carbonized at high temperatures. This lamp was successful enough to warrant further investigation.

An ozone generator has been installed in the Chicago public library which will generate ten thousand cubic feet of air a minute. This system not only keeps pure air in the large reading room, but acts as an automatic deodorizer and disinfectant.

Inventive minds have been trying for a long time to hit upon some process by which old newspapers could be reduced to a pulp and the ink extracted, and the pulp made into printing paper again. But the extraction of the ink has hitherto been unaccomplished. From Germany, however, comes the news that the paper pulp is treated with alkaline solutions so as to cause a change in the greasy part of the ink so that it ceases to hold the lampblack or other pigments, and they are easily extracted from the fiber by making an emulsion of the pulp with gelatinous silica.

Writing from Berlin, the correspondent of the London Daily Express refers to the prominence attained by the Jews in Germany. "Among the Roman Catholics," he says, "thirteen per cent thousand, and among the Protestants 25 per cent thousand receive a university education, but among the Jews no fewer than 160 per cent thousand receive academic training. More than half the doctors and lawyers in Berlin are Jews, and the same numerical predominance can be noticed in most great German cities. The Jews predominate also as university professors, as teachers, as journalists, as artists and architects—in short, in all professions."

Recent studies indicate that hitherto unrecognized associations may exist among certain sets of stars, involving not only common motions in a particular direction, but similarity of physical condition. Dr. Ludendorff says that most of the principal stars in Ursa Major, the Great Bear, including five of those forming the well known "dipper," constitute a definite system traveling among parallel lines in space. Ejnar Hartsprung corroborates this, and adds a number of other conspicuous stars, including Sirius, Beta Aurigae and Alpha Coronae, to the system. It is remarkable that of the fifteen stars included in the supposed system, no fewer than nine are double.

Queensland lies in an artesian basin, "the largest known in the world," for it covers over half a million square miles, and its discovery and the drilling of wells have worked wonders in the vast areas of this western Australian country. Mosquitoes are so bad that sleepers have to build fires to keep them off. It seems that some of the bored wells fill large lagoons and run into shallow trenches over miles of the country. Some of these wells spurt out water at a temperature as high as 200 degrees Fahrenheit, and some only 60 degrees. Some are good for watering stock, some for irrigation and some have so much alkali and mineral as to be useless, but are said to cure all manner of diseases.

NO WORRY IN DENMARK.

Problem of Cost of Living Settled There Long Ago.

A little neck of land in the Baltic sea, about the size of Maryland, supports an agricultural population equal to that of Nebraska and the two Dakotas. Yet an American farmer would pass by the soil and climate of Denmark as being unsuited for agriculture.

The problem of the cost of living, which means the elimination of waste, was an issue in Denmark when Daniel Boone was hunting buffalo in Kentucky, writes Milo Hastings. So the Danes, realizing that society left to itself becomes a game where one man draws a chalk mark on the sidewalk and charges the rest of the crowd for the privilege of walking across, took early measures for the establishment of co-operative marketing of farm produce.

The Danish consumer does not worry about the food trust or middlemen, for the creameries, eggeries and packing houses are co-operative, and if the price of food is too high the farmer is the only one to blame. Under this regime Danish food exports have grown from practically nothing forty years ago, until now the little country sends to England every year nearly a hundred million dollars worth of butter, eggs and bacon.

That a country more densely populated than New England should export large quantities of foodstuffs is a condition hardly conceivable to the American who realizes that if railroad connections west of Buffalo were shut off we would have bread riots from Portland, Me., to Jacksonville, Fla.

Another good thing in Denmark is the custom of taxing and selling land by the "Hartkorn," which is a unit of productivity rather than of area. This productivity of the land is reappraised every five years, and is the basis of all legal and popular estimates of land value. Such a custom should interest a public that for two generations has accepted a homestead law which places 160 acres of Florida celery land (sufficient to support the members of the United States Senate and their families) upon a par with a quarter section in eastern Colorado, where a goat would require a motorcycle to glean a living.

MEETING A RHINOCEROS.

It was an adventurous afternoon that Lieut. Col. J. H. Patterson describes in his book, "In the Grip of the Nyika," and there was a useful lesson to be learned from the experience. It is never well to go down a precipitous, narrow track into a bush-covered ravine in wild country in Africa without first assuring oneself by much stone throwing and hallooing that there is no dangerous beast lurking at the bottom. In the following incident no such precaution was taken.

I was mounted, as usual, on Aladdin, and accompanied by my two Masai, Abbudi and Mellauw. I saw plenty of game in all directions, and on my way passed quite close by and watched a cow rhino with its little baby, a few days old, beside it. The young one looked very much like a pig.

Soon afterward my progress was barred by a deep ravine with very steep sides. As it would have been impossible to take a horse down where I struck it, I walked along the edge for some distance till at last I found an animal path, which we could just manage to follow to the bottom, although it was somewhat precipitous and narrow.

Mellauw went down first, I followed, and last of all came Abbudi leading Aladdin. The ravine was a wide one—at least thirty yards across at the bottom—and was covered with dense bush.

When we got down Mellauw was just about to force his way through this undergrowth when he suddenly stopped and whispered to me, "Bwana, fow!"—"Master a rhino!"

"I asked under my breath, 'Wapi?'—"Where?" and he replied in a frightened undertone, "Hapa, karibu sana!"—"Here, just beside us."

There was not room enough to turn Aladdin, so I signaled to Abbudi to back him up the side of the ravine. While Mellauw and I quickly scrambled to what safety we could secure behind a tree. Here we waited for the expected charge of the now disturbed and suspicious brute.

I held my rifle ready, and we hardly dared breathe while we listened to its angry snorts and watched Abbudi and Aladdin slowly making their way backward toward the summit.

Very luckily for us, the wind was blowing strongly from the rhino in our direction. Had it been the reverse, the beast would undoubtedly have scented us and charged while we were all in the narrow path, and might possibly have killed or maimed all of us, as there was no way of escape. As it was, the creature stood undecided for a few moments, sniffing and snorting loudly; and then, not being able to make us out, it crashed off out of the ravine in the opposite direction.

I was hugely relieved and pleased to see its broad back show now and again through the scrub as the animal swiftly made its way up the far bank of the nullah and disappeared into the bush.

Woman's Athletic Progress.

A time is foreseen by Harvard's physical director when women as a result of their devotion to athletics will overtake man in physical development.

By grace of tennis, golf, horseback riding, swimming and through gymnasium training young women who have leisure for such pursuits have greatly improved their physique within a generation. Yet the progress made, Dr. Sargent thinks, is only the beginning. Fashion, freedom from worry and other causes are all helping a development which will eventually make woman man's physical equal if not his superior.

It is not to be forgotten that woman is fast becoming man's equal in business and politics as well as his partner in athletic sports, and that she may be expected to assume her share of the cares and worries from which she is now free and which retard physical growth. There are other considerations. It has not been shown that a girlhood given to strenuous athletics is conducive to good looks in middle life or that an uncorrected outdoor existence fosters the desired symmetry of outline in the matron. Fashion may yet interpose objections. It is not impossible that a regulation of feminine college sports in the interest of scholarship and class standing may be enforced as the result of masculine agitation for an equality of the sexes in sport.—New York World.

Two Puzzles.

1. How long would it take to divide completely a two-foot block of ice by means of a piece of wire on which a weight of five pounds hangs?

Solution: A block of ice would never be divided completely by a loop of wire on which hangs a five-pound weight. For as the wire works its way through, the slit closes up by refreezing, and the weight falls to the ground with the wire, leaving the ice still in a single block.

2. Two men, standing on the bank of a broad stream, across which they could not cast their fishing lines, could not agree as to its width. A bet on the point was offered and accepted, and the question was presently decided for them by an ingenious friend who came along, without any particular appliances for measurement.

He stood on the edge of the bank, steadied his chin with one hand, and with the other tilted his cap on his head till its peak just cut the top of the opposite bank.

Then, turning round, he stood exactly where the peak cut the level ground behind him, and by stepping to that spot was able to measure a distance equal to the width of the stream.

The Mystery.

Elizabeth and Mary are the most peculiar girls! Elizabeth has braided hair and Mary bobbing curls;

But that's the only difference between the happy pair.

And when you see the swinging braid you know the curls are there.

They live across the roadway and they have a fond "good-night."

And they call across "good-morning," at the very earliest light.

They do their work together and they study and they play,

And they have to see each other at least twenty times a day!

They talk and laugh and chatter till you'd think that they had said

Every single thing that could be found within a small girl's head.

But when they sleep together after talking all the day

They have to wake each other up—they have so much to say!

You'd scarce believe this story, but in all the tongues we speak,

Whether French or German, English, Latin, Portuguese or Greek,

Sufficient words are lacking, and a language all their own

Has this clever pair invented for their use when all alone!

They let me hear it one day, and my brain it simply whirled

To hear them glibly saying each unutterable word!

Yet they tell me Mary cannot learn a single Latin noun—

And Elizabeth in German has been seven times sent down!

When I ask them if they'll kindly clear the matter up for me

They simply stand and giggle, and then say, "Why, don't you see?"

I know they think me stupid, though they're always most polite,

And they sometimes come and tell me when they've had a little fight.

I see them walking slowly with their heads an inch apart—

I find them in the orchard cutting up an apple tart;

I see them making bonfires or a very shaky swing,

And I fear I sometimes hear them when they're madly quarreling!

But what I really want to know and never can find out

Is what on earth that couple has to talk so much about!

—George Phillips.

Buried Treasure.

Once upon a time there was a cluster of cottages on a mountain side, and the people who lived there were so very poor that often they had nothing at all to eat. In the summer the children stayed their hunger on the wild strawberries they found in the valleys. The land was so fertile that blackberries grew almost as big as plums, and the little people were as busy as the squirrels when autumn came in, storing up nuts for winter use. When these were exhausted and the keen north winds blew in from the sea, they huddled together in the fireless hovels they called their homes, and cried so bitterly with the cold that the sound of their weeping reached a wise old Brownie.

Now, the Brownie loved little children better than all the rest of the world, and he did his best to help them by whispering into their frost-bitten ears what fun it would be to run races in the snow. When they did this they were quite warm, but the poor little things were too weak to run about for long, and soon were as cold again as ever.

When the frost-bound earth began to soften, the wise old Brownie made up his mind that next winter they should be better off. So he dressed himself up as a gray-haired witch, and, mounting upon a broomstick, rode off to the sunny slope where the children's fathers were idling away their time.

"If you were to dig that land," he told them, pointing down to the fertile valley, "you would come across buried treasure, and be rich men. You could wear fine clothes then, like the men in other villages, and your wives would have brave new gowns, instead of rags."

Then he flew away on his broomstick to a belt of fir-trees, and waited to see what would happen next.

At first no one seemed inclined to hunt for the buried treasure; they were accustomed, you see, to doing just nothing at all. But after a while the wife of one of them, who had overheard what the Brownie said, borrowed a spade and began to dig in the valley, and, not to be outdone, they all followed her example.

They dug and dug, but still no treasure appeared; and one day the least dull of them suggested that, as the ground was now so well prepared, it would do no harm to turn it into a garden.

A neighboring farmer, who had often pitied their poverty, generously gave them potatoes and seeds, and soon there was a big market garden where there had been only wild flowers and weeds. So fine were the crops that grew there that when they were taken to market they fetched a good price, and though the mountain folk found no buried treasure, when winter came there was gold and silver in the old wives' stockings, and the children were warmly clad.

When the Brownie paid them another visit, they greeted him with a storm of howls.

"Where is the treasure you spoke of?" they demanded, showing their fists; but the Brownie only chuckled. The fruits of the earth were the treasure that he had thought of, and now that through him the idlers had learnt to be industrious, he was well content.—Chicago News.

Birthdays in China.

In China all the boys born during the year have their birthday celebrated on the same day, no matter what date the real birthday is. It is a great occasion, for the Chinese banners are hung out and processions take place. How would you like it if all children in this country had their birthdays in the same way, and had one great big birthday party instead of many little ones?

COULD NOT GET RID OF BOXES.

They Were So Large No One Would Move Them.

Once there was a man who came into possession of some boxes. Nothing funny in that? Of course not. Anybody who had a chance to get some nice packing boxes would have been as glad as he was.

"They're big ones," said the friend who gave them to him, and the recipient laughed happily.

"The bigger the better," he said, merrily. "I'll send down to the place and get 'em this afternoon."

That afternoon he approached a move wagon man and told him he had fourteen packing cases to be moved, and asked what he would charge. The move wagon man took a stub of pencil and made a calculation based upon usual charges of 25 cents a box, and finally agreed to move them for $2.50 as a whole. The box owner then went home and waited for his boxes. At last he called up the place where the boxes had been stored. The owner of the storeroom was angry. He more than intimated that the boxes were in the way and suggested that the owner come down and take them away. The move wagon man had come, seen and departed, shaking his head.

The owner then went down to straighten out the matter. He found that the boxes were indeed large. One was a little fellow eight feet square, while the others could have held a couple of square pianos apiece. They were foreign-built boxes, dovetailed and firm, and built with screws and cleats and plainly intended to remain boxes.

"This ain't no lumber yard," suggested the man who had the storeroom. "You'll have to get 'em out this afternoon. I need the room."

Then the owner worked the telephone frantically in search of a purchaser. By 4 o'clock three people had called, looked at the boxes and taken fright. They were very large boxes. By 5 o'clock the owner was trying to give the boxes away. One man agreed to take them, and he was happy until the man called up and, remarking that he didn't bargain to remove houses, threw up the job. At 6 o'clock he nearly had a fight with the owner of the storeroom, and it ended in the box owner hiring a negro at 50 cents an hour to make lumber of the boxes, and hiring a move wagon at $2 a trip to haul the lumber away. When he came to analyze the situation he found he had bought $3 worth of second-hand, nail-studded lumber of odd sizes, and had paid $4.50 for it.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weakness, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

Wasted a Fortune on Skin Trouble

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limb, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there. I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies, and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Mrs. Bertha Sachs, 1621 Second Ave., New York, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1909."

"Mrs. Bertha Sachs is my sister-in-law and I know well how she suffered and was cured by the Cuticura Remedies after many other treatments failed. Morris Sachs, 321 E. 89th St., New York, N. Y., Secretary of Deutsch-Ostrower Unt-Verein, Kemper Hebrew Benevolent Society, etc."

STUDENTS' CHEAP LIVING.

Ten Members of the "Epicurean" Fared Well at $1.20 a Week.

The "Epicurean," a "self-boarding" club of university students, closed, with the Christmas vacation, the tenth week of its existence. The experiment proved a success beyond all anticipation.

Ten boys are in this club, says the K. U. Graduate Magazine. For doing the work—cooking, dishwashing, etc.—the members are divided into five pairs. Each pair prepares four meals a week, not more than two in succession. The amount of time required for the preparation of each meal, taking out twenty minutes for eating, averages from one to one and a half hours. In addition to this, Wednesdays and Saturdays are "special clean-up" days.

All the members serve in succession as stewards, each member holding the office for two weeks. Club rates are secured by them on all purchases.

The rotation of the office of cook gives special variety to the fare.

The expense of furnishing the combined kitchen and dining room amounted to $30. Bulk groceries for beginning cost $20. Work done in furnishing the room amounted to $14. The rent was $8.50. This made the starting expense about $75. The money for the starting and running expenses was raised by ten weekly assessments; two of $4, one of $2 and seven $1. This amounts to $170. The fixtures now on hand—dishes, tables, chairs, cupboard, gas range and cooking utensils—are worth more than $40. Groceries on hand at Christmas would net over $10. This leaves $120 as the cost of boarding ten young men for ten weeks, or $12.00 a week for each man.

The many fears of starvation and ill health which women, especially, are likely to associate with bachelor life, certainly do not apply here, for all the members have enjoyed excellent health and have added weight. One man has gained eight pounds, another six and a half, and others almost as much.

Pupils in the Philadelphia public schools are being taught to board and alight from street cars in a safe manner.

ANCIENTS SURPASSED US.

Many Secrets They Possessed Are Lost to Modern Times.

Many secrets the ancients possessed are lost to modern times and many things they did cannot be equaled to day. Thousands of years ago the Egyptians used to embalm the bodies of their dead kings and nobility so perfectly that the bodies are in wonderful preservation to-day, as may be seen at the British museum. Clever as we are in this age, we cannot do the same. The valuable secret is lost, and modern science cannot recover the lost knowledge. Bodies embalmed nowadays will not be preserved for more than a few years at most; very many of the bodies of Egyptians embalmed before the birth of Christ are still so perfect that the lines of the faces are marked as clearly as when they were first embalmed.

Sheffield turns out the finest, hardest and most perfect steel the world produces, but Sheffield cannot produce a sword blade to compare with those the Saracens made and used hundreds of years ago, and the Saracens never possessed the machinery we have, nor had the advantage of knowing so much about metals as we are supposed to know. A huge fortune awaits the man who discovers the secret which enabled the Saracens to make sword blades so keen and hard that they would cut in two most of the swords used in our army to-day.

There are a dozen different methods of making artificial diamonds, but none of the stones produced by these methods can compare with those made of old French paste, the secret of which is lost. So perfect were past diamonds that it was difficult for ever a person with expert knowledge of diamonds to tell that they were artificially produced, whereas most of the modern artificial diamonds can be detected easily, and their durability is nothing like so great as the old past diamonds.

Probably not one out of every ten thousand buildings standing in all parts of the world and built by modern masons will be standing 500 years hence. We do not know how to put stones and bricks together as the ancients did, and consequently the building we raise nowadays will be in ruins when the ancient buildings in Greece and Italy, which were built thousands of years ago, are in as good condition as they are now. The secret is not in the bricks or stone, but in the cement and mortar, neither of which essentials can we make as the ancients made them.

Chemistry, one might imagine, is the science which has made the greatest strides in the last five or six decades. Yet modern chemists cannot compound such dyes as were commonly used when the great nations of to-day were still unborn. Now and again it happens that searchers after antiquities come across fragments of fabrics which were dyed thousands of years ago, and they are astonished by the wonderful richness of the color of the cloths, which, despite their age are brighter and purer than anything we can produce.

Modern artists buy their colors ready made and spend large sums of money on pigments with which to color their canvases. The pictures of modern artists will be colorless when many of the works of ancient masters are as bright as they are to-day. Just as the secret of dyeing has been lost so has the secret of preserving the colors of artists' paints. Yet the secret was known to every ancient artist, for they all mixed their own colors.

COUNSELS SON BY WIRELESS.

Marconi Connection Between Father and Boy at College.

"10:20 p. m.—Joe, what are you studying now? Don't forget your French. Good night. DAD."

This message, or one somewhat like it, the Philadelphia Bulletin asserts is likely to be roaming about the atmosphere by wireless any evening. At present it is likely to be transmitted only by Dr. Walter Webb of Sharon Hill to his son, Joseph S. Webb, a freshman at Swarthmore College.

The finer details of this minute-by-minute parental guidance were completed recently when a receiving station was installed in young Webb's room in Wharton Hall, the boy's dormitory at Swarthmore College. He and his father have had a station at their home for some time and they have installed one at college so that the son will not grow rusty in handling the key.

The beauty of the scheme is seen after a little thought. Suppose the young man writes home that, owing to the press of studies, he will not be able to visit the old folks over Sunday. Then on Monday his father clicks out a message inquiring whether Joe had received one which was sent the previous day. What excuse could be offered?

Of course, this is not likely in this particular case, because Webb is a diligent student and does what he says he intends to do. But when the practice of having wireless stations at all homes and all schools is common what will the average boy do?

At present Joseph Webb, at school, has only a receiving station. Dr. Webb can counsel and admonish him to his heart's content and there will be no "back talk."

And so it may go on. Inventive fathers may devise a thousand and one ways of keeping the son at college up to scratch. When such home and school connection becomes general it is hard to say how unbearable a college boy's life will become.

He Saw Booth in "Othello."

Dr. John Girdler tells this. Edwin Booth story as Mr. Booth told it to him: "We opened an engagement in Atlanta with 'Othello' (said Mr. Booth), and I played Othello. After the performance my friend Mr. Malone and I went to the hotel for some refreshments. While we were waiting to be served I couldn't help overhearing a conversation between two fine old boys, splendid old fellows in soft hats, flowing mustaches, black string ties and all the rest of it.

"I didn't see you at the theater this evening," cunel, said one.

"No," drawled the other. "I didn't go for seats until this a-mawin' and the best I could find were six in the balcony. I suppose you were there?"

"Yes, cunel, I was there. Madam, and the girls were with me, and we all agreed that we never attended a mo' thrillin' play. The company was good, too—excellent company! And, do you know, cunel, in my opinion that nigger did about as well as any of 'em."—New York Morning Telegraph.

UNCLE JOE CANNON.

He Also Speaks Well of Canada.

No matter what may be the opinion of Mr. Joseph Cannon, no matter if he may be looked upon by some as a czar, and by others as a big, warm-hearted man, with many of the instincts that make humanity very bearable, all will admit that he is a man who has been advertised more than any other man in the United States. What he may have to say therefore on any subject, will have weight. Observant, he speaks his mind freely. He was interviewed the other day by the correspondent of a Canadian newspaper, he spoke of his admiration for Canada, and he is quoted in a way that pictures fairly well the personnel of the man. The correspondent says he launched out into personal biography, proverbial philosophy, political comment, cynical scorn, broad profanity and sentimental poetry such as one rarely hears in the space of an hour. He discussed the Canadian tariff, and then said: "People say I break the Ten Commandments, all of them. But I don't, at least not often. I did break one of them up in Canada two or three years ago. As I rode from Winnipeg to the Rockies over your great West and saw the finest wheatfields in the world, I thought of Virginia and a lot of our States, and I smashed the Tenth Commandment every hour of the journey. Yes, sir, I coveted my neighbor's land."

Coming from a man of the fame of Mr. Cannon, these were words that should have some weight with the Americans who may still have doubts of the advantages that are offered to them in Western Canada. A home amongst the wheat fields. Hundreds of thousands of Americans are adopting it. They go to Central Canada, to any one of the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, or to the coast Province of British Columbia, take up their homestead of 160 acres, and probably pre-empt another 160 acres, or it may be they do not care for pioneering twenty or thirty miles from an existing railway, and purchase a farm. Then they settle upon it and, having no clearing away of timber they begin at once to cultivate it, and make money. That they make money and much more than they could possible make on the high-priced farms they have left, is the evidence of hundreds of thousands. They do not leave civilized life, they but remove from one sphere to another. They have splendid social conditions, churches, schools, rural telephones, splendid roads, railways, convenient just the same as what they left, and what is more, they get much greater returns from their crops, which give abundant yield. The climate is perfect, and it is no wonder that most flattering reports are sent back to their friends in the States, and it is no wonder that Joe Cannon was tempted to speak as he did. He "coveted" his neighbor's land.

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

GOLDSBORO HEARD FROM

A Lady Who Lives in Goldsboro Joins in the Chorus of Praise for Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

Goldsboro, N. C.—"A physician treated me for many distressing symptoms," writes Mrs. Etta A. Smith, "but gave me no relief.

"I suffered with neuralgia around the heart and was troubled at times with my head. I had pain in my left side, bowels, left thigh, shoulders and arms.

"After taking Cardui, I am now well and can recommend it to other suffering women."

Just such doubtful symptoms, as those from which Mrs. Smith suffered, are the ones for which it will pay you to take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

It is at such times, when there is nothing to show, for certain, the real cause of the trouble, that you need a tonic, to give the body strength to throw off the illness that evidently threatens.

Take Cardui, when you are ill, with the ailments of your sex. Take Cardui as a tonic, to prevent illness, when you feel it coming.

Your druggist keeps it.

TAGGART SEEKS A VINDICATION

What His Friends Say of His Candidacy.

FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT MADE

Former Chairman of the National Democratic Committee Commits Himself to the Race For a Seat in the United States Senate, Saying He Will Make as Good a Fight as He Knows How—Friends Say It Is a Race For Vindication.

Indianapolis, April 23.—Tom Taggart has made formal announcement of his candidacy for the United States senate, if the convention decides to nominate, and if not he will be a candidate before the Democratic legislative caucus. He says:

"I will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator under any circumstances. In the event that the coming state convention decides to take the matter up and make the nomination, then I will go before the convention as an aspirant for the nomination and shall make as good a fight as I know how. In the event the convention leaves the matter to the next legislature I will be a candidate for the honor then."

Close personal friends of Taggart say that he is making the race for vindication and that he proposes to show his opponents in the Democratic party that he has lost none of his popularity.

Taggart's sympathizers are gathering up proxies in all parts of the state and it is said that money is being used as freely as at any state election ever held. The liquor plank for the platform has been prepared under direction of the Taggart men. It declares for the repeal of the local option law and demands better regulation of the liquor traffic and the payment of $1,000 license tax.

Democrats are talking at a great rate about the possible significance of Taggart's formal announcement. Taggart men are pleased and are asserting that the announcement never would have been made if Mr. Taggart had not already assured himself that he will be able to prevent the state delegates from adopting Governor Marshall's senatorial selection plan. In other words, the Taggart men declare that they have the fight won, and that the Democrats in convention will refuse to uphold the Marshall scheme for endorsing a senatorial candidate.

Taggart men do not go so far as to say that the state convention will endorse Mr. Taggart for United States senator. But they do assert that the convention will not endorse any other man.

John E. Lamb declares that Mr. Taggart's announcement for senator is a bluff pure and simple, and that it is meant to frighten certain timid Democrats who apprehend that a Democratic state convention is in danger of voting to endorse Taggart out of hand for the senatorship. Mr. Lamb affirms that there is no possible danger of a Taggart endorsement by the delegates. "Mr. Lamb may think I am bluffing, but he will be surprised," is Mr. Taggart's retort.

L. Ert Slack will lead the delegation from his county in the state convention and will vote for the governor's plan. It can also be said that Mr. Slack's name will be presented as a candidate for United States senator if the governor's plan is adopted, although Mr. Slack has not opened headquarters. There is much speculation as to just where Taggart would throw his strength in case the question should go before the convention and he could not be nominated. It is a safe bet that it would not go to John E. Lamb. There are many who believe Taggart would get behind John W. Kern. It is declared Taggart opposed Kern for the United States senatorship two years ago, not because he personally desired to do so, but because he was tied up with some others to support B. F. Shively.

There is considerable talk among the friends of Mr. Kern of a boom for Kern. It is the opinion of some that a bandwagon rush for Mr. Kern would be about the best boost the governor's plan could receive. It is argued that the assurance that Mr. Kern would have a strong following in the convention and probably would be the man who would be chosen to oppose Senator Beveridge would be a strong inducement for the delegates to vote for the endorsement plan.

MARK TWAIN'S EXPRESS WISH

Was for the Simplest Sort of Funeral.

PALL-BEARERS NOT WANTED

Besides the Simple Service in New York Today, There Will Be Held Within the Next Ten Days a Memorial Service by Men Prominent in All Walks of Life Who Desire to Show Their Respect For the Dead Writer.

New York, April 23.—Those who had the arrangements for the funeral in hand, following Mark Twain's express wish, have dispensed with pall-bearers. Besides the simple service at the Brick church today, there will be some time within the next ten days a memorial service held by the many prominent men in all walks of life who desire to show their respect for the dead writer.

Those who are acquainted with the business affairs of Mark Twain believe that the first accounts of the size of the estate which he has left were exaggerated. A close friend of his said that although the author had a comfortable fortune, he was far from being a millionaire. "The royalties from his books, payments that were made for his later contributions to magazines and successful dealings in Wall street netted him a pretty good sum in the last ten years of his life," said this individual. "I should not say that his estate amounted to more than a quarter of a million. At the time of the organization of the United States Steel corporation Mark Twain made some investments in the stock of the corporation on the advice of his friend, H. H. Rogers. The investments were successful and I believe that they brought considerable profit to him. From that time on he made occasional investments in stocks and was uniformly fortunate."

What the amount of Mark Twain's royalties and other profits from writings have been during the last ten years is not known outside the circle of his immediate friends. A representative of Harper & Bros., who have been his publishers in recent years, said that all of Mark Twain's books are selling at present in greater numbers than ever before.

It has become known that Mr. Clemens left unpublished several manuscripts besides that of his unfinished biography. These, which are in the hands of a few close friends, publishers and editors, had not even been offered for publication. Together with several fugitive scraps and pieces of unfinished material, the author had given these manuscripts over into the hands of his literary executors to be disposed of after his death as they saw fit. His biography, which he began in a haphazard sort of way a year or so ago and portions of which have been published, still remains to be published in completeness.

Those acquainted with the author's business affairs said that with the exception of a few minor bequests to close friends and relatives, his will provides that his daughter Clara, Mrs. Gabriellotti, shall be the legatee of all of his estate.

AT THE SORBONNE

Roosevelt Delivers Lecture at Great University Today.

Paris, April 23.—The chief feature of Colonel Roosevelt's visit in Paris today was his lecture at the Sorbonne, which was listened to with the closest attention by a large and distinguished audience. In compliment to his hearers the colonel delivered his lecture in French.

Yesterday Colonel Roosevelt had one of the most impressive hours of his stay in Europe, when he visited the tomb of Napoleon, built more than half a century ago. It is surrounded by the emblems of the great warrior's victories. The scene made a deep impression on Mr. Roosevelt. He had few words to say while viewing the tomb, and these were whispered.

The visit to the tomb was followed by an automobile ride and a luncheon and reception to the American colony at the embassy. President Fallieres gave a state dinner at the Elysee palace last night in Roosevelt's honor. Mrs. Roosevelt and the children were present, as were several of the prominent men and women in France. Replying to his toast proposed by President Fallieres, Roosevelt eulogized France as the center of the light of civilization.

ALBERT ELDER'S "TAW" PROBLEM

Willie Barnes and Albert Elder were playing marbles.
"Ha! Ha! that's another moon in your agate!" cried Willie as he "plunked" Albert's "taw" out of the ring.
"Oh, I'll get even with you," replied Albert; "it's my shot now!"
So all the boys crowded 'round to see Albert make his shot and sure enough he "plunked" Willie's "taw" an awful whack.
"Cheeminy Christmas! that must have made a full moon, Albert," shouted one of the boys.
"Oh, that's nothing; we're only even now--just one moon each," said Willie.

HERE'S A PROBLEM.

Now, boys and girls, just suppose Willie and Albert, playing for an hour and having fifty shots each, Willie misses Albert's "taw" four times and Albert misses Willie's three times. How many moons did they put in each others' "taws"?
And see if you can guess how long Willie and Albert will have to soak their "taws" in lard to make the moons disappear if one moon leaves every hour. Can you? Send your answers to Albert Elder, care of this paper.
